

Image ©David Churchill

The fully-automatic Skyfold Zenith moveable wall is stored neatly out of sight in the ceiling cavity. At the touch of a button, it slides down into place as almost entirely flat panels.

Limited space solutions from Style

With floor space always at a premium, moveable wall expert Style strives to deliver solutions that minimise the amount of space needed to stack panels when a partitioning system is not in use, without compromising acoustic privacy.

For example, the fully-automatic Skyfold Zenith moveable wall is stored neatly out of sight in the ceiling cavity. At the touch of a button, it slides down into place as almost entirely flat panels. This exceptional thin path of travel allows a room to be quickly divided without even moving furniture. There are four Zenith models capable of delivering laboratory tested acoustic performance ranging from Rw48 dB right through to an incredible Rw59 dB. There is also the sound absorption Zenith with a 0.65 NRC rating.

The sliding Dorma Variflex ML moveable wall is another outstanding solution that features panels with a significantly reduced thickness of just 88mm. Thanks to the clever use of modern acoustic materials; once in the place, the wall still offers excellent sound insulation of up to Rw 58 dB, but when not required, the panels can be tucked into the smallest possible space.

"When space is limited, some architects, specifiers, contractors and end-user clients dismiss the idea of trying to sub-divide it through a flexible room configuration," said Julian Sargent, Style's Group Managing Director.

"That's where we can help. As exclusive UK partners to Skyfold and Dorma, we have products that will fit into the tightest of gaps that have to be seen to be believed.

"Better still, the acoustics are phenomenal, and they can be styled in a range of finishes to complement any interior design."

The sliding Dorma Variflex ML moveable wall is another outstanding solution that features panels with a significantly reduced thickness of just 88mm

Space saving

www.style-partitions.co.uk
sales@style-partitions.co.uk
01202 874044